THE

CLAYBORNES

By WILLIAM SAGE

Author of "Robert Tournay"

Illustrated, - - - $1.50

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT said in his Charleston speech: "Our Civil War was incomparably the greatest of modern times, and its memories are now priceless heritages of honor alike to the North and to the South." This is the spirit in which Mr. Sage has written "The Claybornes," a romance of the days of '61. His earlier book, though his first, won him immediate recognition and rapidly went through numerous editions. His new novel will doubtless be even more popular.

A Wholesomely Humorous Novel

At Sunwich Port

Humorous Drawings By WILL OWEN

Full of Character and Genuine Fun

By W. W. JACOBS, Author of "Many Cargoes," Etc.

A NOVEL very close to human nature and overflowing with the bubbling humor characteristic of this teller of wonderfully good stories. The scene is the English coast, and the story is full of quaint, real characters and salt air.

Another Fascinating Book by the Author of "Nooks and Corners of Old New York."

When Old New York Was Young

By CHARLES HEMSTREET

FULL of quaint reminiscence and information of bygone days and pervaded by the sentiment for the romance and the record of New York which marks the author's other works and gives him, equally with his wide and minute knowledge of his subject, a unique position as an annalist of his native city.

NO BOOK published this year has had such a cordial reception from the trade as

The Mississippi Bubble

First, second, and third printings were sold before publication day.

"Mr. HOUGH has written one of the best novels that has come out of America in many a day. 'The Mississippi Bubble' is on entirely new lines, and while thoroughly dramatic, is never sensational. It is an exciting story, with the literary touch on every page. There is no snap-work here—it is all carefully and well considered."

—JEANNETTE L. GILDER, editor of The Critic.

A Romance Full of "Snap" and "Go"

NONE BUT THE BRAVE—

By HAMBLEN SEARS

IT is invigorating, once in a while, to read a book that fairly carries you off your feet. Rarely, indeed, do we come across one possessing so much vim and vigor, as this stirring tale of the Revolutionary War, by Hamblen Sears.

The action of the story is not only constant, but it is fascinating on every page. The plot is most unique. The Tory maid is the most aggravating minx that a man ever spilled blood for; and yet—well, you're glad enough to meet her every time she comes on the scene, tantalizing as are her mysterious moods. The three Colonial guardsmen are heroes of the most fascinating kind, and their adventures are many and of the most desperate sort.

"None but the Brave—" is sure of a most enthusiastic audience.

THE MEDITATIONS OF AN AUTOGRAPH COLLECTOR

By ADRIAN H. JOLINE

BY a curious paradox an autograph collector is not a collector of autographs. At least, Mr. Joline is not. He has spent many years collecting autograph letters, and he has them from celebrities all over the world—from the late Queen Victoria to Ruskin, and Robert Burns. They are reproduced, many of them in fac-simile, in this new volume. But the chief and most interesting things the author has collected are dozens of good anecdotes and stories, and he tells them remarkably well. It is a volume that every book-lover, and everybody who enjoys bright, witty stories, will buy.

PRACTICAL GOLF

(New and Revised Edition)

By WALTER J. TRAVIS

THERE has never been a "golf" book that contained so many practical suggestions about every detail of the game—the way to stand in addressing the ball, the "swing," just how to hold the different clubs, how to "approach," "putt," etc., etc.—as this treatise by Mr. Travis. Nor is there anyone better qualified to write with authority. Mr. Travis has been a "champion" for many years, and the main point is that he tells others how to play, from having studied the game and worked out its difficulties himself instead of having learned it from others. So he is able to make the points of the game exceptionally clear to every player; he has just won the open golf championship at Lakewood where he was the only man to start from "scratch." In the new edition of his book he has brought it fully up to date—new chapters about newly improved clubs, the "Haskell" ball, etc., etc.

NOTES IN SEASON.

THE SAALFIELD PUBLISHING COMPANY will publish soon a new story for young people by Mary E. Ireland, entitled "Timothy and His Friends;" also, "The Last Cruise of the Electra," by Charles P. Chipman, a story for young people of sea life in an electrical submarine boat.

R. H. RUSSELL will publish a volume of short stories by the Duchess of Sutherland, entitled "The Wind in the Tree," illustrated by Walter Crane. He has just ready "A Bunch of Buckskins," eight drawings in pastel by Frederic Remington, reproduced in exact facsimile; also, "The Story of Cupid and Psyche," translated by Walter Pater, which is put out in superb form.

HOUGHTON, MIFFLIN & Co. will publish shortly the following new volumes in the American Commonwealths series: "Texas," by William P. Garrison, Professor of History in the University of Texas; "New Jersey," by Austin Scott, President of Rutgers College; "Louisiana," by Albert Phelps; "Illinois," by John H. Finley, Professor of Politics in Princeton University, and "Wisconsin," by Reuben G. Thwaites, Secretary of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin.

D. APPLETON & Co. will publish early in May "Heralds of Empire," a story of the days of Radisson, the adventurer, by A. C. Laut, author of "Lords of the North;" "These Delightful Americans," by Mrs. Everard Cotes, (Sarah Jeanette Duncan,) a witty picture of America and Americans as seen through English glasses; also, "Prisoners of Russia," observations in the penal establishments of Russia, by Dr. Benjamin Howard, with an introduction by General O. O. Howard, with a number of illustrations.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & Co. publish to-day "The Brook Book," by Mary Rogers Miller, who follows a typical stream through the year, describing in a most entertaining way its various stages, its vegetable and animal life and everything of interest connected with it, with 16 full-page half tones and about 50 text cuts; "An Introduction to the Study of English Poetry," by Prof. Mark H. Liddell; also, "A History of Wachovia," by J. H. Clewell," a scholarly historic work, dealing with the Moravian Church in North Carolina from 1752-1892.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL & Co. have in preparation the authorized edition of Tolstoy's latest work, "What Is Religion," in which the author goes into definition of his views which have caused the controversy between him and the Russian church; a "Comprehensive Guide-Book to Hygienic Diet," a vegetarian cook-book which should prove helpful during the reign of high prices for meat and during hot summer weather; also, John Hay's National Memorial Address on William McKinley delivered by the Secretary of State before the House of Congress.

HARPER BROTHERS will publish on May 2 "The Meditations of an Autograph Collector," by Adrian H. Joline, who has an extraordinary collection of autograph letters, many of which will be represented in facsimile; "Her Serene Highness," by David Graham Phillips, a story that reminds one of the best work of Anthony Hope; "Hardwicke," by Henry Edward Rood, a realistic story of the trials of a broad-minded young clergyman among a lot of bigoted villagers; also, a new and revised edition of Walter J. Travis's standard treatise on "Practical Golf." They will publish on May 16 "An Onlooker's Note-Book," a volume of comment, anecdote and reminiscence, by the author of "Collections and Recollections."

WEEKLY RECORD OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.*

Hiley, Alan R. I., and Hassell, J: A. The mobile Boer: being the records of the observation of two burgher officers (captains of scouts in the Boer army). N. Y., The Grafton Press, [1902.] c. 17+277 p. il. por. maps, D. cl., net, $1.50.
The authors say in their preface: "It is our intention in these pages to deal with the Boer-English war and the events which actually transpired as we had opportunity to see them. The fact of our being in the Republican forces—born foreigners—the tone of the descriptions of stirring incidents and the citation of injustice and cruelty must exempt us from the reproach of prejudice." The authors claim that the American Revolutionary and Boer wars are parallel instances of national injustice.

Reed, Edwin. Bacon and Shake-speare parallelisms. Bost., C: G. Goodspeed, 1902. c. 12+442 p. O. bds., net, $2.50.

Reed, Edwin. Francis Bacon, our Shake-speare. Bost., C: E. Goodspeed, 1902. c. 242 p. il. O. bds., net, $2.

The author's first work on the subject of the authorship of Shakespeare, entitled "Bacon vs. Shak-spere. Brief for Plaintiff," published in 1897, and now in its eighth edition, is mainly devoted to the historical evidence pertinent to the case, indirect and circumstantial as the evidences necessarily are. The second volume, "Francis Bacon, our Shake-speare," deals with internal criticism, and shows the philosophic purpose for which the plays were written. In his third volume, "Bacon and Shake-spear parallelisms," Mr. Reed rests the argument for Bacon on the sole author of Shakespeare's poems and plays on a single point, viz., identity of thought and diction between them and his acknowledged works.

THE ART OF BOOKSELLING.

WE commend to the careful study of the rising generation of booksellers the remarks of Mr. William Heinemann, of London, on the art of bookselling, quoted elsewhere in this issue. There can be no question that the main hope for the development of the book-trade lies in the ability of the bookseller to get books before the readers. Advertising can accomplish something; in special cases, it has even seemed to be supreme. Department store methods also accomplish something; in certain directions they are quite effective. However, all things considered, neither advertising nor department store methods can cover the ground that a skilled bookseller, alive to his every opportunity, can cover.

There are still too many booksellers who labor under the delusion that "they also serve who only stand and wait." That may have done in blind Milton's case; but it will never help the cause of the modern bookseller. Not only must he be up and doing, but he must be thoroughly posted on those among whom it will pay him best to do his "hustling." Every one of his efforts must hit something somewhere. Misdirected efforts in conducting business are as exhausting to the bank account of a merchant as striking the air is exhausting to the athlete.

Every day some bookseller throughout this country is missing an opportunity of selling the right kind of a book to the right kind of a man. This is due partly to negligence or laziness, partly to ignorance. Even when a customer exposes himself to the wiles of the bookseller many fail to make the fullest use of their opportunity simply because they are not well enough acquainted with their stock. Let these sluggards learn a lesson from that ant—the peddler of subscription books. If a book canvasser were but half as poorly equipped with information of the books that he is expected to sell as many booksellers are, he might starve before the end of his first week's career. As a matter of fact, he is never permitted to start out before he is able to pass an examination on the book that he undertakes to canvass. And this, it seems to us, might to some extent be reasonably expected of the bookseller. We admit it would be difficult for him to acquire as thorough a knowledge of his entire stock as the subscription book canvasser is able to get of the few separate books he handles; but the principle might be applied to the better class of books—the books it pays to handle. Such information, coupled with an intimate knowledge of his constituency and the books they are likely to be interested in, would, in a short time, give an enormous impetus to bookselling.

Every year bookselling is bound to become less and less a mere mechanical function, and become more and more a calling that will demand a great deal of intelligence, enterprise and skill, depending less upon the chance customers who come to the bookstore than upon the careful fostering of a steady demand among regular customers, many of whom might not come to the bookseller's establishment twice in the year.

In this direction, we agree with Mr. Heinemann, the bookseller would be materially assisted if he were supplied with all books that he might want, except novels, "on sale or return." This system has, to a certain extent, been the salvation of the German book-trade. It has also been the means of building up the periodical publishing business, notwithstanding many palpable abuses. Nothing can be so impelling to the purchase of it as actual inspection of a book. Be the circular or advertisement ever so explicit or convincing, a doubt will always lurk in the prospective purchaser's mind, that can only be removed by ocular demonstration.

At a recent gathering of bookmen the statement was made that, given ten thousand Americans, one thousand would buy books regardless of price; another thousand would buy books if the price were right; but the remaining eight thousand would have to be made to buy books at any price. We leave the consideration of the moral to our readers.

THE AMERICAN BOOKSELLERS' ASSOCIATION ON DISCOUNT TO THE LIBRARIES.

A MEETING of the Executive Committee was held at the office of the Association, at 30 East Twenty-first Street, New York, on the 17th and 18th inst. There were present the president, Clarence E. Wolcott, Charles W. Burrows, J. Wilson Hart, W. M. Palmer, Clarence W. Sanders, A. C. Walker and the secretary, J. W. Nichols. A letter was read from Mr. William T. Smith, expressing his great disappointment in not being able to be with the committee, but saying that he was ill and had been confined to his bed for some time. By a unanimous vote the secretary was directed to write Mr. Smith, on behalf of the Executive Committee, expressing their keen regret that illness should have detained him from the meeting, and conveying to him their sympathy and best wishes for his speedy recovery.

The following memorial to the Executive Committee of the American Publishers' Association, with reference to allowing greater discounts to public libraries, was framed and adopted:

To Mr. Frank H. Dodd and Members of the Executive Committee of the American Publishers' Association.

GENTLEMEN: In response to a resolution presented to your honorable body by the Pennsylvania Library Club and the New Jersey Library Association, we beg leave to submit the following, in behalf of the American Booksellers' Association, which we have the honor to represent.

The resolution of the librarians is as follows:

"Resolved, That the American Publishers' Association be requested to consent that dealers and publishers be permitted to give to librarians a discount up to twenty-five per cent. (25 %) on net books."

Since this is the same rate of discount that usually is allowed by publishers to dealers, on net books, the resolution practically asks that local dealers shall be required to maintain bookstores for the distribution of your books, by the investment of their capital in your books with the constant risk of not being able to sell them and so recover the money invested; that dealers shall be required to pay transportation on your books from your warehouses to every city throughout the country; that dealers shall be required to pay for clerk-hire to sell your books to libraries; that dealers shall be required to pay insurance on your books in transit and to store; and that dealers shall be required to sell and deliver your books to libraries at precisely the price which they pay you for your books in your own warehouses, in cities remote from the libraries. And finally you are urged to allow your members to sell their books directly to libraries at 25 per cent. discount, which is precisely the discount that you recommend your members to allow to dealers, in your own warehouses.

This latter provision was evidently recommended, in order that you might compel local dealers to deliver your books to libraries at the same prices you actually charge dealers for your books in your own warehouses; and thus you are asked not only to deprive local dealers of any profit on your books thus furnished, but actually to entail upon all dealers a serious loss in the cost of handling such books, as above indicated.

Indeed the resolution, as at first framed, asked that "libraries should receive the same discount as local dealers;" but the request evidently seemed so bald and so manifestly unfair, that it "was amended," so "that a definite rate should be asked for," as above stated.

When this matter is fully understood by librarians throughout the country, we firmly believe that they will be ashamed that any organization of librarians should have presumed to make such an unreasonable request in their behalf.

We beg leave to direct your attention to the fact that the average librarian, throughout the country, is absolutely dependent upon the bookseller, to help him make suitable selection for the library.

It is the business of the bookseller to know all of the different editions of standard authors, and to know their relative price and value. In the conduct of his business the dealer buys catalogues, annuals, trade papers and reviews; and it is a part of his profession to study them diligently. He knows the success of each popular book, as well as the peculiar field covered by each special book. Moreover, the dealer is constantly showing books to the wealthiest and most cultivated people in his community—people who have been taught never to read a book that they do not purchase and make their own. Such people make their selections with great care and with a nice discrimination. Thus in the conduct of his business the local dealer is constantly exchanging opinions with the ablest critics, or with readers who seek only the best and most helpful books. On the other hand the average librarian leads a more secluded life. He is in the alcoves re-arranging the books, and classifying and cataloguing them.

We recognize that in the great national, state, city and university libraries, there are trained librarians who have exalted their calling to a profession. We recognize the worth of such librarians, as long as they confine their sphere of activity to their calling as public servants. But we protest when they undertake to pervert the use of public funds entrusted to them, to a combined effort to break down an established trade or industry, in which a large amount of capital and labor is involved.

These professional librarians make the speeches and read learned papers at national and other gatherings of public librarians, as though their system and methods were applicable to the average library; but they are not.

If you were to examine the clerks of our large public libraries, you would find that there are employed at public expense, assistants to make up lists of books to be purchased for the libraries. These assistants are trained book-buyers, who study catalogues, annuals, trade papers and book reviews, just as do local booksellers, in order that they may make intelligent and wise selections.

If such a clerk were employed by the average public library, his annual salary would amount to several times the annual profit of the local bookseller, on all books purchased by the local library—even if he were to receive the full net price for each book purchased.

But it is the general practice of the average librarian to ask the local bookseller to help him make up his list of purchases, as often as he has an appropriation for the purchase of books. This service is rendered by the local dealer often at the expense of a day, and sometimes several days, of valuable time.

When the list is made up the librarian submits it to jobbers and wholesale dealers in other cities, as well as to publishers and they are asked to bid for the order. When the bids are received the lowest one is the basis upon which the local dealer is told he can have the order, if he is so fortunate as not to be entirely ignored.

The price quoted on such orders by jobbers, wholesale dealers and publishers, is usually the price at which the local dealer purchases your books, unless they are protected by the net price system. Thus the local dealer, in order to hold his local trade, is compelled to furnish the books to the local library at the same price he pays for them in the warehouses; and he is also compelled to incur the serious loss in handling your books as above described. We submit that since the local dealer does the work and incurs the expense of furnishing books to the local library, he is entitled to a living profit. Surely the laborer is worthy of his hire!

Thus far we have spoken only of own interests and of the interests of local dealers whom we have the honor to represent. But we now beg that you will consider your interests and the interests of authors whose books are entrusted to you for publication.

If you will require public libraries, in common with all other purchasers, to pay the full net price, practically all local dealers will be warranted in ordering at least one or two copies of each new book you publish, while the larger dealers will order even more generously than at present. This will give to authors and publishers a general introduction of each new book published, in every locality throughout the country. Local dealers will thus be given an opportunity to exhibit your new books in their store windows, to show them to their customers, to advertise them in local papers, and thus to create a local demand for them, with a reasonable certainty of selling the books so ordered to a local library, even if they fail to create a general local demand.

This general introduction of books will afford an opportunity to all readers, including a large class of people who never frequent public libraries, to examine your books, as soon as they come from the press, to the mutual advantage of authors and publishers. Is it not your duty to conserve this advantage for the mutual interest of all concerned?

It was urged by librarians, at the meeting recently held at Atlantic City, as shown by the published report, "that their patrons demand that a larger number of books must be bought each year."

But public libraries are usually founded by wealthy philanthropists; and they are maintained by the levying of public taxes, even to the payment of a generous salary to local librarians; and since local dealers cheerfully pay their share of these taxes, is there any reason why they should be further taxed by the use of their time, capital, and hired service, without an opportunity to make a living profit?

If the people want more books in public libraries, as is alleged, let them tax themselves still more; and local dealers will as cheerfully pay their share of the additional taxes. There is no possible reason why local dealers, authors and publishers should bear the whole burden! If you sacrifice the profits of dealers this year, in response to the demands of librarians, another year you will be asked to release to librarians your own profits, in order that with "present appropriations," librarians may be able to meet the progressively increasing demands."

It was further alleged in the general discussion at the recent meeting of librarians, "that the present rule of library discounts is frequently honored in the breach, so that there is a great inequality of practice." We do not believe this is true. But since the charge is made, it is either a direct attack upon the integrity and good-faith of your own members, in carrying out their mutual agreement, or it accuses dealers of violating your rules for the maintenance of the net-price system.

If it is true that any member of your Association has been guilty of giving a greater discount than ten per cent. on net books to a public library, it is not necessary for you to abandon the system on that account. It is only necessary for you to point out such publisher, and the members of the American Booksellers' Association will promptly decline to buy his books, to put them in stock, or to offer them for sale, as is provided by our "Reform Resolution Number One." It was unanimously adopted for this very purpose, as well as to enable us to induce publishers, outside of your Association, to join you and co-operate with us.

On the other hand, if any dealer is allowing a greater discount than ten per cent. on net books, to public libraries, all members of your Publishers' Association are bound to cut off to such dealer, the supply of all their books, net, copyright and otherwise. Thus if either case be true, there is no reason for abandoning the reform. Is it not more likely that this premise was assumed for the purpose of stirring up discontent or distrust, with the hope that this would lead to the dissolution of both of our Associations? We must not allow ourselves to be disturbed by idle rumors.

Certain instances were cited by the librarians, where the prices of books published in series had been increased to the public. It would have been strange indeed, if in the adjustment of their business to the new conditions, some members of the Publishers' Association had not made mistakes in pricing their books. But, if so, where the price has been made too high, or too low, the publisher of the book has suffered most for his mistake, since he has most invested. This is a matter that should give no one any anxiety, since it will soon adjust itself.

One suggestion was made at the recent meeting of librarians that seems worthy of consideration, namely: "There are large numbers of books which it is not at all necessary to have as soon as published, but which even though bought a year or so after publication are of the utmost value to librarians. These can be bought in practically new condition from remainder catalogues."

If this be true, and if public librarians are now buying such books on publication, and paying a greater price for them then they would have to pay a year or two later, it is certain that they are unduly prodigal in the use of public funds entrusted to them. If this be true, public librarians, who are our public servants, should be reprimanded, and this abuse of their trust should be promptly corrected.

If you will require public libraries to pay the full net price for all of your publications as is done by English publishers, you will enable dealers to purchase your books liberally, to introduce them thoroughly during the first year after publication, and to push their sale effectively. Then, at the end of the period in which the net-price system is protected, such books as you do not choose to maintain under the net-price system, and thus keep permanently on the market, can be put on our clearance counters and closed out. This will afford public libraries an opportunity to purchase at lower prices; and their limited "appropriations" can be made to go farther in meeting the demands of the patrons of libraries.

Since it is proposed that librarians buy from "remainder" catalogues, is it not proper that public libraries should serve as dumping grounds for the sale of remainders? The shelves of booksellers throughout the country hold many monuments to the mistakes of publishers. These books should be sold to public libraries, where they may be read by people who are unable to buy books, and thus to cultivate a taste for better literature.

If you have read the report of the discussion at the recent meeting of librarians, it can not have escaped your notice, that the "professional librarians," who dominated the discussion, plainly expressed a threat, that if you do not make "concessions," they will resort to "devices and makeshifts in book-buying;" that they will boycott your publications and import English-made books; that they will patronize public book-auctions; and that they will buy from remainder catalogues."

We shall await with interest to observe, whether your honorable body is to be coerced by the threats of a few over-officious public servants. We are confident that the average librarian will not be moved to resort to such methods. On the contrary most librarians are anxious to maintain pleasant and friendly relations with local booksellers, from whom they are constantly receiving invaluable assistance.

If it should be thought practicable for librarians to import English books directly, without the assistance of American publishers, we beg leave to direct your attention to the fact, that it would be quite as practicable for dealers to combine and import collectively for their patrons, thus eliminating American publishers entirely from the transaction.

By preference we are booksellers, and we would prefer to buy the books of you, provided you will sell them to us at reasonable rates of discount, and protect us in securing such prices as will yield us a living profit. But if you are to sell your books directly to retail customers, at the same rates you sell them to us, thus entirely eliminating all possibility of our making a profit, you can not expect us to invest our labor and capital in maintaining bookstores, either for your accommodation, or for the accommodation of local libraries.

In England, where libraries are older and more generally established, publishers deem it necessary to charge the full net-price to all public libraries, and to public institutions. In Germany where the net-price system originated, publishers began by allowing libraries a discount of ten per cent. Later they reduced this to five per cent.; and it is probable that this rate will soon be discontinued, and libraries will be required to pay the full net-price.

Having reviewed the essential facts of the case, we submit to you, that it would be for the best interests of authors, publishers, dealers, and of the reading public, to have all books sold to all persons, libraries, and institutions, at the lowest possible price for which they can be written, published and sold, with a living profit to authors, publishers and dealers. To do more than this, to remove the profit from either party, would be to destroy a link in the chain of factors, through which literature is produced and distributed. For this reason we beg you to change the rate of discount allowed to libraries, since you have been asked, by librarians, to do so; but in changing it, we urge that hereafter you require all libraries to pay the full net-price.

The burden of complaint by the "professional librarians," who spoke at the recent meeting, was that they were compelled to pay higher prices than they paid before the net-price system was adopted. In this connection you will recall that prior to the adoption of the new system, librarians were buying books at the same prices, and often for less than were paid by local dealers. At the same time, the patrons of the libraries, the friends of the librarians, and their friends' friends, were allowed to order books through the libraries, at wholesale prices, and to have them shipped from your stock-room by the use of public funds.

We beg leave to remind you that this was one of the particular "evils of the trade" that you joined hands with us nearly two years ago to correct. We trust that no backward step will be taken at this time. The blessings of reform have not yet been showered plentifully upon retail booksellers. The business does not yet yield a living profit to dealers, so that they do not particularly value the privilege of selling your books. They are rather buoyed up by our hope and promise that there is something better in store for them in the book trade. The reform must go forward or be abandoned. We cannot turn back.

The threat that was made, at the recent meeting of librarians, had previously been voiced by the librarian of the New York State Library, in a paper that appeared in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, under date January 18, 1902. This "professional librarian" has been the militant enemy of the booktrade in New York State for a number of years. He has done more to break down the established booktrade of New York than almost any other factor. Emboldened by his success, and thinking that he saw the finish of the local bookseller, more than a year ago he publicly advocated that the local bookseller should be abolished, and that local librarians should be allowed to take the orders of people wishing to buy books, and send them in to the publishers.

This matter was reviewed at length by a member of our Executive Committee before a meeting of the American Library Association, held at Waukesha, on the 9th of last July, and his address appeared in THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY on the 14th of the same month. So forcibly did Mr. Palmer present the subject that the librarians present freely assured him of their support of the local bookseller.

We had hoped that the librarian at Albany would desist from his persecution before we be compelled to resort to extreme measures. If he continues his persecution, we shall recommend an appeal to the electors of this state, as to whether they are disposed to allow a public servant to use State funds and his official position, to browbeat publishers, and to break down a great trade in which so much labor and capital are invested.

We shall recommend an appeal to all labor organizations and to both political parties, to see that, in their nominating conventions, delegates and candidates for the State Legislature, are pledged to the removal of the present incumbent, and a thorough investigation of all his methods in vogue in the State Library.

It must be well known to you that the Albany librarian is accustomed to order several sets of standard works at the same time, being several times as many as are needed for the State Library. He also buys duplicates or remainders, of which he needs only one or two copies for the State Library. What does he do with the surplusage, do you ask? He puts it in a back room. Then when a local library up the State receives an appropriation, or when a new library is established, the local librarian makes up his list and submits it to the State librarian for approval. If the price bid by the local dealer is not practically the cost or purchase-price at which the dealer buys the books, the order will be filled from the back-room of the State Library, and the local dealer will be ignorant as to who was his successful competitor.

An examination of the annual report of the State librarian at Albany fails to show any profit on transactions of this nature; neither does it show any loss. But it costs money to buy and sell books! If there be no profit there must be a loss! We have no disposition to inveigh against the honesty of a public servant until his accounts are thoroughly investigated. However, the fact that the State Librarian at Albany recently asked that local booksellers be abolished and that their business be turned over to local librarians, would seem to indicate that the Albany Librarian has had a "taste of a good thing," and that it has whetted his appetite for more. While the book-business is not profitable, in its present condition, which we are jointly attempting to remedy—if one could be given a suite of offices in the State Capitol, gratis, a good salary out of the public crib, and public funds which are raised by taxing the people, to do business with, the book business would be a cinch!

We do protest against the use of public funds to carry on a book business, in competition with our local trade, which works to us serious loss and injury.

When a public servant so "magnifies his office" that he mistakes himself for master, it is high time that his successor was appointed.

If there is any law on the statute books that justifies such conduct by the State librarian, it must be repealed. Its passage could have been secured only by misleading the legislators as to the intent and purpose of the law.

Not many years ago, boots and shoes and other articles of merchandise were manufactured in State prisons and sold through ordinary channels of trade, to the profit of the State. Organized labor was quick to recognize the injustice of using state funds to carry on an industry in competition with the citizens of the State. A protest was entered and a law was passed restraining the practice. From that day to this the product of prison labor has been confined to supplying the needs of the inmates of the prisons.

We are confident that organized labor is still jealous of this principle, and that it will quickly respond to our demand that the State librarian be restrained from using his official position and the State funds to break down our industry in which much labor and capital is engaged.

We do not believe that other librarians will be willing to put themselves in such an awkward position as that occupied by the New York State Librarian. If, however, he should develop apostles of his peculiar economic creed for taxing booksellers, in the general levy of state taxes, to raise a fund with which to break down the business of the same booksellers, we shall urge all state and local branches of our Association to follow the example of the American Booksellers' Association of New York State, and to appeal to local labor organizations, to political parties, to candidates for the legislature and for municipal councils, to protect booksellers from such abuses.

In view of these facts, we do not think that you need have serious apprehension on account of the threats uttered at the recent convention of librarians.

Most sincerely,

CLARENCE E. WALCOTT,
CHARLES W. BURROWS,
J. WILSON HART,
W. M. PALMER,
CLARENCE W. SANDERS,
WILLIAM T. SMITH,
A. C. WALKER,

Executive Committee.

J. W. NICHOLS, Secretary.

The following resolution was also adopted by the Executive Committee:

WHEREAS, The operation of the net-price system has been of real and much needed benefit to the retail booksellers in the larger part of the country; and

WHEREAS, The operation and extension of the net-price system will give hope of still greater aid to booksellers and publishers alike, and

WHEREAS, It is the unanimous opinion of the Executive Committee of the American Booksellers' Association that an extension of the time limit, during which the price of net books shall be protected, is urgently needed,

Now therefore be it resolved, That we petition the American Publishers' Association to extend the one-year period to a period not less than two years, and

Be it further resolved, That we petition all members of the American Publishers' Association to extend the protection of the net-price system on all books published during the past year, that they desire to keep permanently in the market; and that formal notice of such intention be given to this Association before the expiration of the year during which they are to be protected under the present arrangement; and

Be it further resolved, That we express to the American Publishers' Association our gratification over the progress that has been made in limiting the discount on new copyrighted fiction, and that we strenuously urge the American Publishers' Association to reduce the maximum discount allowed upon fiction to 20 per cent. of the long list price, and furthermore to include all new copyrighted fiction under the net-price system, as soon as practicable; and

Be it further resolved, That we request the Publishers' Association to extend Article VII. of the Publishers' Agreement to all dealers, so that dealers, as well as publishers, shall be required to add the cost of postage or expressage to the net price of all books sold at retail to customers outside of the city in which they are doing business.

To avoid conflicting with the practice of taking semi-annual inventories in July, and to enable members to be at home in August to receive travelling salesmen, and to prepare for the fall opening of the school-book trade, it was decided to change the date of holding the annual convention. The Executive Committee will convene at the office of the Association at 10 o'clock on the morning of June 16th; the convention of the Association will be called to order at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the same day and will continue in session again on Tuesday, the 17th. The banquet will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock on the 17th of June.

COMMUNICATIONS.

MORE THAN SATISFIED WITH BOOKTRADE REFORM.

To the Editor of The Publishers' Weekly.

DEAR SIR: I am much gratified at what you say editorially in the issue of the WEEKLY for April 19th under the heading of "The Publishing Reform."

I take pleasure as a retailer in stating that I have been more than satisfied with the result of the year's trial, and believe it to be the first indication that I have seen in my thirty-eight years' experience in the book business of a possible future for the retail bookseller.

I can only commend the efforts of those who have done so much under the most adverse conditions, to make this movement the success that I think it has already proved to be.

Yours very truly,

W. B. CLARKE.

BOSTON, April 21, 1902.

THE ART OF BOOKSELLING.

WE extract the following from a "real conversation" with Mr. William Heinemann, one of the most progressive and successful of London publishers, recorded by William Archer, the art critic, printed in the recent issues of The Pall Mall Gazette and The Critic.

W. A. . . . What is your general feeling as to the state of the book-market in England? Are things, on the whole, getting better or worse?

Mr. Heinemann. Undoubtedly better—very distinctly better. Of course, we have great difficulties to contend with, but we are gradually overcoming them.

W. A. Difficulties? Such as——?

Mr. Heinemann. Well, there are many; but the fundamental difficulty is, of course, in a crowded market, to get books shown and seen. This some of us are meeting by the gradual introduction and adaptation of the Continental system of supplying books to the booksellers "on sale." It is my own practice, for instance, in the case of almost all books, except novels, to allow any bookseller whom we know to be trustworthy to have copies of whatever books he wants "on sale or return."

W. A. And you find the plan answers?

Mr. Heinemann. Most certainly. It is the only way of enabling the majority of books of the better class to get at their public.

W. A. What about wear and tear and depreciation of the stock you issue in this way?

Mr. Heinemann. Of course that is an item that has to be allowed for. The English custom of binding all books before publication stands a little in the way of this system. A German or French paper-covered book, if it gets soiled or faded in the bookseller's shop, can be re-covered for a fraction of a farthing; whereas in England it may cost ninepence, or a shilling, or more, to re-bind a shop-soiled book. That is only one of several drawbacks to the system that conservative members of the Publishers' Association enlarge upon. I admit all these drawbacks, fully, freely. But I say that the greatest drawback of all is to fail to sell your books. . . .

W. A. . . . What should you say was the special function of the Publishers' Association?

Mr. Heinemann. Broadly speaking, its function is to educate the booksellers. You may think it a paradox, but it's not far from the literal truth, that many booksellers in England never see a book of any value or importance, but live entirely by peddling novels, old and new. The booktrade will never be in a thoroughly healthy condition until we have a body of selected and trained booksellers all over the country, to whom we give depots of books on sale, and say to them: "Now, sell these—don't merely wait till people come to buy them, but sell them—that is your business!" English booksellers, with rare exceptions, have never realized, or have forgotten, that bookselling is no mere mechanical function, like handing out tickets for the Twopenny Tube, but is a calling that demands a great deal of intelligence, enterprise, and skill. A bookseller who really knew his business—I am speaking especially of the country and suburban trade—would never bother about the chance customers who came to his shop.

W. A. Hallo! isn't that going rather too far?

Mr. Heinemann. Oh, don't misunderstand me. He would see that the people who came to his shop had all possible attention, and a great deal more intelligent attention than they receive at present. What I mean is, that he would regard them as the accidents and accessories of his business, the main part of which would be the fostering and supplying of a steady demand among regular customers, many of whom might not come to his shop twice in the year.

W. A. Then how would he get at them?

Mr. Heinemann. In various ways. Largely through prospectuses and circulars—of the skilled use of which the English bookseller has as yet no idea. But in many cases he would put the actual books before the people who he knew would be likely to want them. Look at our scores of large towns inhabited mainly by people of means and leisure—who ought to be the backbone of the reading public—and you will find that there the bookselling trade is conducted with incredible negligence and stupidity. Ask a bookseller in Brighton, or Bath, or Hastings, whether he has even a list of possible customers for special professional books, and he will tell you that he has never thought of keeping one. But every German bookseller, for instance, has not only a list, but a carefully classified list, of his clientèle, and can tell at a glance how many he can rely upon to buy this book, how many to buy that. To take an obvious example, he knows that such and such a doctor is a throat specialist: he sends to his house, without waiting for an order, a new book on diseases of the larynx; and if the doctor doesn't want it, he fetches it away again in a day or two. Another doctor is a chest specialist: to him he sends a book on the Nordrach open-air cure—and so forth.

W. A. But don't you think that people in England would be apt to be rather irritated by this system of "pushfulness?"

Mr. Heinemann. Certainly, if it were not applied with intelligence and tact. But bookselling ought to be a skilled, and a highly skilled, employment—that is precisely the point I am insisting on. You, I daresay, collect books on the drama?

W. A. Yes, in a very modest way.

Mr. Heinemann. Well, if I deluge you with prospectuses of books on horse-racing, or bimetallism, you think me a fool, and throw my circulars into the waste-paper basket, with comments to that effect. But I don't suppose you would be irritated if I sent you a prospectus of a book, say, on the French stage—or even, for inspection, the book itself?

W. A. I should probably call down on you the curse appointed for those who lead us into temptation—but I should very likely succumb.

Mr. Heinemann. The long and the short of it is, the bookseller should not be a mere penny-in-the-slot machine, but an intelligent intermediary between the publisher and the reading public. That is why I am utterly opposed to the mixing up of bookselling with other trades, and will always move heaven and earth to check the tendency. For instance, the Newsvendors' Association, a very powerful body, with five or six thousand members, is putting pressure upon us to publish novels at three shillings, which they would stock, and thus take trade out of the hands of the legitimate booksellers. I will fight to the last against such a proposal, for I believe it would be disastrous to booksellers, to publishers, and to authors—in the long run even to the very novelist, who might hope at first to benefit.

W. A. In short, to literature. Yes, I can see the importance of what you say. It would certainly be an immense advantage to literature, and indeed to the intellectual machinery of the nation as a whole, if booksellers as a class were educated men who took an intelligent interest in their calling. . . . Speaking of Germany, I wish you would explain a matter that has always puzzled me. Who finances the enormous scientific and philological literature of Germany? The press teems with long and learned treatises, the mere setting of which must cost considerable sums, and which cannot possibly have a large sale. Can you explain to me how this vast literature is kept going?

Mr. Heinemann. Yes, I can—by the scientific organization of the booktrade. Of course, there are other things to be taken into account. In the first place, Germany abounds in small "endowments of research." It swarms with professors and "docents," each with his small salaried post, living with a frugality incredible to an Englishman of similar status, and devoting his life to his Fach, his special study, out of sheer love of it. It is these men that write the books you speak of.

W. A. Oh, yes, I quite understand how they come to be written; it is the fact of their ever getting printed and published that puzzles me.

Mr. Heinemann. Well, of course the cost of manufacture is somewhat less in Germany than in England. But that isn't the real secret. It is, as I say, the scientific organization of the booktrade. You see, the men that write these books also read and must possess these books. Each of them, that is to say, must have the books of his own special study—they are the tools of his trade. Well, the booksellers know this; and, all over the country, they know how to get at these men with the greatest certainty and the least expense. You know how many specialist magazines there are in Germany—archiv for this, that, and the other thing. Why, there are two or three in connection with English literature alone—Angelsächsische Studien, Englische Studien, and so forth. Each of these will have its constant body of subscribers, and the subscribers to the magazines may be confidently reckoned upon to buy the books appertaining to the same study, which are often merely the overflow from the magazines—treatises too long for insertion. Then there are a great number of university libraries and similar institutions, which must have all scientific publications. Thus the sale of one of these learned works can be foretold almost to a copy. And remember that there are no advertising expenses to be reckoned with. Literary advertisements are almost unknown in Germany, except in the case of big productions, such as a popular encyclopædia. For most books only one advertisement is needed—in the Börsenblatt. This paper is read conscientiously every morning by every bookseller throughout the length and breadth of Germany; and, knowing his clientèle to a nicety, he knows almost to a nicety how many copies of any given book he must write for. . . .

OBITUARY NOTE.

Francis Richard Stockton, the well-known novelist and short story writer, died suddenly April 20, at the house of Louis S. Finney, 2183 P Street, Washington, D. C. Mr. Stockton was born April 5, 1834, in Philadelphia. After graduating at the Philadelphia High School, in 1852, he began work as an engraver. Soon after he decided to try newspaper work and went to Boston, where he obtained employment on the Riverside Magazine, for which he wrote boys' stories. After a few years he returned to Philadelphia and engaged in newspaper work. In the seventies he became connected with the Hearth and Home, published by S. M. Pettingill & Co., of New York. After that journal suspended publication Mr. Stockton joined the editorial staff of Scribner's Magazine, which post he relinquished to become assistant editor of St. Nicholas. His "Rudder Grange" papers in Scribner's, in 1879, first attracted widespread attention to his work. In the same year the Scribners published a volume of his stories. Two years later he gave up editorial work and devoted all his time to writing fiction. His published books include: "Roundabout Rambles;" "Tales Out of School;" "A Jolly Felowship;" "Captain Chap;" "The Story of Viteau;" "Ting-a-ling Stories;" "What Might Have Been Expected;" "The Floating Prince Kobel Man;" "The Bee Man of Orne;" "The Clocks of Rondaine;" "Personally Conducted;" "Stories of New Jersey;" "Buccaneers and Pirates of Our Coast;" "The Lady or the Tiger;" "The Young Master of Hyson Hall;" "The Late Mrs. Null;" "The Great War Syndicate;" "The Hundredth Man;" "Stories of Three Burglars;" "A Chosen Few;" "Adventures of Captain Horn;" "Mrs. Cliff's Yacht;" "The Great Stone of Sardis;" "The Girl at Cobhurst;" "Rudder Grange;" "The Rudder Grangers Abroad;" "Pomona's Travels;" "The Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine;" "Christmas Wreck and Other Stories;" "The Dusantes;" "Amos Kilbright;" "Ardis Claverden;" "The Merry Chanter;" "The House of Martha;" "The Watchmaker's Wife;" "A Story-Teller's Pack;" "The Associate Hermits;" "The Vizier of the Two-Horned Alexander;" "Afield and Afloat;" "Bicycle of Cathay;" and "Kate Bonnet." Mr. Stockton did his writing only in the forenoon and seldom put pen to paper. Many of his stories were dictated to his wife, who acted as his amanuensis, and wrote out his dictation in long hand. He frequently wrote the last chapters of a book first, after he had mapped out the tale in his mind. He lived for many years at Covent, near Morristown, but spent considerable time in Florida and Virginia. Of late years his home has been in Claymont, W. Va. Last fall he closed his house in that place and spent the winter in Washington and New York.

NOTES ON AUTHORS.

Thomas Hardy has refused to allow the publication of a pocket edition of his novels.

Mrs. Humphrey Ward's new novel, "Lady Rose's Daughter," begins in the May issue of Harper's Magazine.

Mrs. Craigie's new novel is to be entitled "Love and the Soul Hunters." It will be published by Funk & Wagnalls Company.

Herbert Spencer will be eighty-three on April 27, but he has a new volume of essays, "Facts and Comments," ready for publication.

The Societe d'Anthropologie, of Paris, has honored an American book by awarding to Professor W. Z. Ripley's "Races of Europe" the Bertillon prize.

Edmond Rostand's reception at the French Academy has been postponed until November. Apropos of Rostand, it does not seem to be generally known that Mme. Rostand is a poet of more than ordinary ability.

Henry Harland, whose latest story, "The Lady Paramount," has just been brought out by John Lane, according to the New York Sun, came near losing all the American profits of his most successful book, "The Cardinal's Snuff Box," through his indifference to American copyright. He thought that it would not be worth his while to copyright the book in this country, because it would be necessary to have it printed here, and Mr. Harland has become so completely Anglicized that he did not care to submit his manuscript to the American methods of spelling. He likes to write "honor" with a "u," for instance. But he was finally persuaded to copyright it here, and the result was a rebuke to his lack of patriotism; for to every one copy of the book sold in England ten were sold here. Mr. Harland has recently been frequently spoken of as a "born New Yorker." This is an error. He was born in St. Petersburg, Russia, in 1861. He was educated in the College of the City of New York and at Harvard. From 1883 to 1886 he was employed in the office of the surrogate in New York. While employed there he wrote his first book, "As It Was Written," a Jewish musician's love story, under the pseudonym of "Sidney Luska."

BIBLIOGRAPHIC NOTES.

We are informed by Mr. L. C. Ferrell, Superintendent of Documents of the Government Printing Office, that the "Tables of and Annotated Index to the Congressional Series of United States Public Documents" was compiled not by William S. Burns, as stated in our issue of April 12, but by William Leander Post, who also devised the scheme for a ready reference to the departmental series of United States public documents.

Sampson Low, Marston & Co. announce a work in two volumes entitled "Rariora," which will be of service to collectors and all interested in the arts and crafts of the fifteenth and later centuries. The author deals with books, manuscripts, autographs, historical documents, literary forgeries, playing cards, ex-libris, broadsides, engravings, etc., as well as coins, pottery, objects in pewter and horn, mineralogical curiosities, etc.

The fifteenth part of the Sammlung Bibliothekswissenschaftlicher Arbeiten, containing "Beiträge zur Kenntniss des Schrift-, Buch- und Bibliothekswesens," edited by Dr. Karl Dziatzko, is an unusually interesting one. The first contribution is by Konrad Haebler, on modern book trade and library systems in Spain. The second contribution is on the legal status of booksellers, printers, and bookbinders in Wittenberg, and other German university town circa 1550-1730, by Hans Leonhard. The third contribution is the first installment of a bibliography of the printed university rolls or registers, treating of the German universities and the Germans abroad. The fourth contribution is an interesting account of the English books offered at the Frankfort fairs from 1561 to 1621, by Max Spirgatis, who uses as data the list of English books in Georg Draudius's "Bibliotheca Exotica," (1625.) The two remaining contributions are by Dr. Dziatzko—one on the composition and presswork of the 42-line Bible, and the other on the proposed tariff on bound books. The pamphlet of 114 octavo pages is published by M. Spirgatis, Leipzig, at six marks, and should be of great interest to booksellers as well as librarians.

Catalogues of New and Second-Hand Books.—Joseph Baer & Co., 6 Hochstr., Frankfurt a. M., Periodicals, transactions and publications. (No. 453, 1420 lots.)—Bull & Auvache, 34 Hart St., Bloombury, London, Eng., Theological and miscellaneous. (No. 249, 946 titles.)—Edwin A. Denham, 28 W. 33d St., New York, Rare book catalogue No. XIII. (126 lots;) also, Imported books, mainly in elegant bindings. (No. 314, 3144-4650 titles.)—M. Spirgatis, 23 Marienstr., Leipzig, Schrift-und Buchwesen. (No. 88, 1147 titles.)

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

The Century Company will publish early next month the "Collected Poems," by Robert Underwood Johnson.

H. L. Kilner & Co., Philadelphia, have issued "Belinda," by Dr. Maurice Francis Egan; also, a little pamphlet treating on Freemasonry.

W. B. Clarke Co., Park Street Church, Boston, has secured the entire edition of "Antique Views of Ye Towne of Boston," and are bringing out a new issue with additional plates.

Clarke Conwell, of the Elston Press, New Rochelle, N. Y., will publish shortly a limited edition of Keats's "Endymion." The title-page and initials have been designed by H. M. O'Kane.

Wilford Bell, Leicester Square, London, has just issued the first four volumes of his Unit Library—"The Vicar of Wakefield," "Sentimental Journey," "Origin of Species," and Emerson's "English Traits."

Edmund D. Brooks, Minneapolis, Minn., has in press a volume of "Poems," chiefly lyrical, by Arthur Upson and George Norton Northrop. The edition will be limited to 350 copies, of which 300 will be for sale.

Lee & Shepard have just ready two books for young people—"King for a Summer," a story of Corsican life and adventure, by Edgar Pickering, with illustrations by Warwick Goble; and "Lost on the Orinoco, or, American Boys in Venezuela," by Edward Stratemeyer, with illustrations by A. B. Shute, a new volume in the Pan-American Series.

The book trade will be pleased to know that Mr. William J. Crowley, who has been manager of the New England Agency of D. Appleton & Company for the last fifteen years, and who has been in the employ of the house for over twenty years, has been promoted by the company, and installed in New York, to the benefit of the business in this city.

The American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society, whose offices are in the Tribune Building, New York City, is publishing a sketch of "Jamestown, 1607-1907," by Edward Hagaman Hall. This is an illustrated sketch of the history and present condition of the site of the first permanent English settlement in America. A map of Jamestown is also given.

John Lane has just ready "Stray Leaves from a Border Garden," by Mary Pamela Milne-Holme, which is described to be a pot-pourri of gardening interests, ranging from literary to horticultural;" also, "Dante and the Divine Comedy," by W. J. Payling Wright, studies and notes which assume an interest in Dante rather than an intimate acquaintance with his works.

Henry T. Coates & Co. will publish in their Griffin Series of novels a story of the Far East, entitled "The Archierey of Samara," by the Rabbi Henry Iliowizi, the author of "The Weird Orient," "In the Pale," and "Jewish Dreams and Realities." They will also add to the Griffin Series "Last Words," a posthumous story by the late Stephen Crane, and "Sawdust," by Dorothea Gerard.

Dodd, Mead & Co. will publish in the fall the biography of Dr. Martineau. The work will be in two volumes, the first of which, containing Dr. Martineau's theological correspondence, will be edited by Principal Drummond, and the second, dealing with his philosophy, will be written by Professor Upton. It is proposed to include four photogravure portraits, and an additional volume of correspondence will be issued later on.

Frank A. Munsey has bought from the executors of the estate of William H. Appleton the Appleton country seat at Riverdale, on the Hudson, a tract of about sixteen acres of upland with riparian rights covering six acres. There is on the place a large three-story stone mansion, now occupied under lease by Samuel L. Clemens, (Mark Twain.) This lease expires in October. It is understood that Mr. Munsey paid about $125,000 for the property.

The Rev. Dr. Rand, secretary of the American Tract Society, after fifty-four years of continuous service as editor of its publications, has offered his resignation, to take effect in May. The Rev. John H. Kerr, D.D., professor of Greek Exegesis and New Testament literature in the San Francisco Theological Seminary, and pastor of the Trinity Presbyterian Church of that city, has been elected secretary of the publishing department of the American Tract Society.

Funk & Wagnalls Company have just ready "The Rustler," a tale of love and war in Wyoming, by Francis McElrath, with illustrations by Edwin Willard Deming; "Daniel Everton, Volunteer Regular," a novel of the Philippines, treating realistically of political, industrial, and social conditions, by Isreal Putnam, with illustrations by Sewell Collins; "Tales from Gorky," translated from the Russian, with biographical notes of the author, by R. Nisbeth Bain.

George E. Littlefield, 67 Cornhill, Boston, is soliciting orders for a reproduction, in type, of the "Journals of the House of Representatives of His Majesties Province of the Massachusetts Bay, 1715," edited by Worthington Chauncey Ford. These records of the legislative action of one body (the lower house) of the Great and General Court have not only a high general historical value, but also a very great local and personal interest. A complete set of these journals is to all intents now attainable. The edition will be limited to 250 copies printed on Old Stratford paper.

Mr. Carson's story, "Hester Blair," was originally written as a play under the title of its principal male character, "Slack Dorkins." The manager about the time the play was to be staged encountering failures with two plays, each of which happened to depend upon a church scene for one of its strongest climaxes, superstitiously attributed his trouble to the church scenes, and requested Mr. Carson to eliminate the church scene in the play. This the author declined to do, preferring to rewrite it for book publication. It is likely that the C. M. Clark Company, who were so fortunate in placing their dramatization of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," will stage "Hester Blair."

Benziger Brothers have just ready "Practical Explanation and Application of Bible History," edited by Rev. J. J. Nash, D.D.; "The Adoration of the Blessed Sacrament," by Rev. A. Tesnière, translated by Mrs. A. R. Bennett-Gladstone; "Spiritual Pepper and Salt for Catholics and Non-Catholics," by Rev. Wm. Stang, D.D., Superior of the Providence Apostolate; "Instructions and Prayers for Catholic Youth;" "Little Manual of St. Anthony," compiled by Rev. F. X. Lasance; "The Holiness of the Church in the Nineteenth Century," translated from the German of Rev. M. J. Scheeben, D.D., edited by Rev. John P. M. Schleuter, S.J.; also, "Corinne's Vow," a novel by Mary T. Waggaman.

The New York Shakespeare Society completed its seventeenth year this week, having been incorporated April 23, 1885, by Albert R. Frey, Roscellus S. Guernsey, James E. Reynolds, A. Chalmers Hinton, and Appleton Morgan, "to promote the knowledge and study of Shakespeare's dramatic works . . . and to collect and maintain a library of books relating to William Shakespeare and the Shakespearean and Elizabethan drama." In the summer of 1885 the society's two first publications appeared — "Ecclesiastical Law in Hamlet," by Rev. R. S. Guernsey, and "Venus and Adonis, a study of the Warwickshire Dialect," by Appleton Morgan. Altogether the society has published twelve separate works, an edition (the Bankside) of Shakespeare's works in twenty volumes, and a quarterly periodical Shakespereana (1886 to 1894,) now the New Shakespereana.

Ginn & Company will publish during the next month an "Academic Algebra," by Beman and Smith; "The Advanced First Reader," by Ellen M. Cyr; a revised edition of "College Algebra," by G. A. Wentworth; "The Elements of English Composition," ("The Mother Tongue," Book III.,) by J. H. Gardiner, George Lyman Kittredge, and Sarah Louise Arnold; "Forestry," by Filibert Roth; "Handbook of Perspective," by Otto Fuchs; "A History for Graded and District Schools," by Ellwood W. Kemp; a revised edition of "Introduction to Physical Science," by A. P. Gage; "Life and Health," by Albert F. Blaisdell; "Manual of Astronomy," by C. A. Young; a revised edition of "Mediæval History," by Philip Van Ness Meyers; "Primary Songs;" "Step by Step," a primer, by S. C. Peabody; also, "Toward the Rising Sun," in the Youth's Companion Series.

Dana Estes & Co. have in preparation a new book by Mrs. Laura E. Richards, entitled "Mrs. Tree," with illustrations by Frank T. Merrill; "Among the Great Masters of Warfare," edited by Walter Rowlands, with illustrations of thirty-two famous battle scenes by great painters; "A Treasury of Humorous Poetry," by Frederic Laurence Knowles, who is also editing a new series of books for young people—Famous Children of Literature—intended to introduce young readers to their literary equals in age without obliging them to read the whole book in which they appear, such as "Little Eva," "Little Nell" and others; "Play Away," a story for young people, of the Boston Fire Department, by Willis Boyd Allen; "Under Scott in Mexico," by Capt. Ralph Bonehill; "The Voyage of the Charlemagne," by William O. Stoddard; "Jimmie Crow," by Edith Francis Foster; "Traveler Tales of the Pan-American Countries," by Hezekiah Butterworth; also, "Chatterbox."

D. C. Heath & Co. will publish at once an elementary "German Composition," by E. C. Wesselhoeft, of the University of Pennsylvania. The book is divided into two parts, Part I. containing selections with independent clauses, Part II. with principal and dependent clauses. The book is designed for students who have mastered the inflections of German grammar, and who have had a little practice in translating easy sentences into German. They have in press for immediate issue an "English-German Conversation Book," by Professor Krüger, of Kaiser Wilhelm's Real Gymnasium, of Berlin, and Professor C. Alphonso Smith, of Louisiana State University. This little book is designed to familiarize students of German with the words and expressions that they must know if their conversation is to rise above the level of bills of fare. It contains in one column the German-English expressions, and in the next the German equivalent, giving frequently alternatives. The chapters on the American college and on German university life will be of particular value to any who are expecting to associate in any way with university circles in Germany.

Charles E. Goodspeed, 5a Park Street, Boston, will publish on May 1 "The Letters of Hugh, Earl Percy, from Boston and New York, 1775-1776." The book will be found an important commentary upon the story of the Revolution. The peculiar position in English politics occupied by Percy is well known, as is also his disaccord with the measures leading to the American war. It might well be expected, therefore, that in his family letters we should find comments upon men, people, and events which would add substantially to our stock of Revolutionary history, and the book will be found to justify such expectations. The originals of the letters were discovered in the library of Alnwick Castle during a visit made by the Rev. Edward G. Porter, of Lexington, in 1878. By permission of the late Duke of Northumberland they were copied, and with the consent of the present Duke they are now first published. They have been carefully edited, with introduction and notes by Charles Knowles Bolton, librarian of the Boston Athenæum, special attention having been given to the preservation of the original orthography. The printing has been done by Mr. D. B. Updike at the Merrymount Press, and a portrait of Lord Percy, especially etched for this book by Sidney L. Smith, appears as a frontispiece. A limited edition has been printed.

Fleming H. Revell Company will publish at once a romance by Carnegie Simpson, entitled "Love Never Faileth." It touches on the two things in life whose secrets are supremely worth knowing—"religion and romance"—and the author dedicates it "to an authority on both—his wife." It will be remembered that Mr. Simpson occupies one of the foremost pulpits in Glasglow—that formerly occupied by Dr. Marcus Dods. His "Fact of Christ" shows his clear, crisp thinking in religion. His first invasion of the field of romance shows the power of being at once interesting to the superficial and profound to the profound. The author's penetration into human motive, together with his remarkable facility in the art of "saying things"—things worth remembering and worth quoting—insures to him a place in the literature that abides. They have in preparation a romantic story of the progression of a heathen Chinese boy in San Francisco up to his present unique position of a Christian High Mandarin in China. Sing, the hero, in his boyhood attracted the attention of John G. Whittier, who spoke of him enthusiastically as "A Chinese Quaker," and so suggested the title of this book. Every principal character is a real personage of distinction. In the best sense the book may be characterized as an unfictitious novel—a romantic revelation by an author who speaks with authority.

TERMS OF ADVERTISING.

Under the heading "Books Wanted" book-trade subscribers are given the privilege of a free advertisement for books out of print, of five nonpareil lines exclusive of address, in any issue except special numbers, to an extent not exceeding 100 lines a year. If more than five lines are sent, the excess is at 10 cents a line, and amount should be inclosed. Bids for current books and such as may be easily had from the publishers, and repeated matter, as well as all advertisements from non-subscribers, must be paid for at the rate of 10 cents a line.

Under the heading "Books for Sale," the charge to subscribers and non-subscribers is 10 cents a nonpareil line for each insertion. No deduction for repeated matter.

All other small, undisplayed, advertisements will be charged at the uniform rate of 10 cents a nonpareil line. Eight words may be reckoned to the line.

Parties with whom we have no accounts must pay in advance, otherwise no notice will be taken of their communications.

BOOKS WANTED.

☞ In answering, please state edition, condition, and price, including postage or express charges.

Houses that are willing to deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis will find it to their advantage to put after their firm-name the word [Cash].

☞ Write your wants plainly and on one side of the sheet only. Illegibly-written "wants" will be considered as not having been received. The "Publishers' Weekly" does not hold itself responsible for errors.

It should be understood that the appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the "Publishers' Weekly" does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it is endeavored to safeguard these columns by withdrawing the privilege of their use from advertisers who are not "good pay," booksellers should take the usual precaution, as to advertisers not known to them, that they would take in making sales to any unknown parties.

Publish To-day

THE CLAYBORNES

By WILLIAM SAGE, author of "Robert Tournay."

Illustrated. Crown 8vo, $1.50.

A romance of the days of '61, giving a vivid picture of the Civil War. It tells of the winning of a Yankee girl by a young Virginian who had been educated at West Point, and who adheres to the Union cause although his father and brother are fighting for the South.

OPENINGS IN THE OLD TRAIL

By BRET HARTE. 16*mo,* $1.25.

A collection of nine new tales of life in the West, told with all the delightful charm of Mr. Harte's other stories.

ROMAN BIZNET

By GEORGIA WOOD PANGBORN. With a frontispiece. 12*mo,* $1.50.

A novel which is distinctive in style and plot. The hero is the son of a half-breed and a French Canadian, and the grandson of a German musician. The keen interest of the novel springs from the portrayal of this strangely endowed personality moving among people of conventional ways and character.

IN THE DAYS OF GIANTS

By ABBIE FARWELL BROWN, author of "The Book of Saints and Friendly Beasts" and "The Lonesomest Doll."

With Illustrations and a decorative cover by E. Boyd Smith. $1.10 net, postage extra.

Stories of the gods, giants, and dwarfs of Norse mythology, clothed with fresh attractiveness by the lively fancy and humor with which Miss Brown invests the tales. The six illustrations are delightful reproductions of the quaint conceits of these old legends.

SOCIAL SALVATION

By WASHINGTON GLADDEN, D.D., author of "Ruling Ideas of the Present Age," etc. 16*mo,* $1.00 net, postage extra.

The author considers the relation of the church and pulpit to social questions of the day. He holds that the Christian purpose is a social as well as an individual regeneration, and that the central interest in these problems is the interest of character.

EDUCATION AND THE LARGER LIFE

By C. HANFORD HENDERSON. Crown 8vo, $1.30 net, postage extra.

Mr. Henderson regards the chief end of educational endeavor to produce men, women, and children of power, accomplishment, and goodness. He criticises existing conditions and gives a clear indication of a way to a better order.

HER SERENE HIGHNESS

By DAVID GRAHAM PHILLIPS

THIS new novel is one of three publications we announce to the trade for May 2. It is a story that reminds one at once of the best work of Anthony Hope. It has the same "go" and brilliancy in the dialogue. The story has to do with a European Duchy where an amateur art collector goes in search of a rare painting. He finds a young lady of rare beauty instead, with whom he promptly falls in love. He finds many other things, too, that the author tells about in a story that is uncommonly interesting and well-written. It is a "Zenda" novel that deals with real people. The book will sell both for its story and for its brilliant dialogue.

HARDWICKE

By HENRY EDWARD ROOD

IN every little village there is always a considerable number of very religious and very narrow people. They are intolerant of new ideas. Of everything that is unorthodox they have an intense hatred. Into such a community, near New York, a young minister of broad views of life and religion, goes to accept a call. He falls in love with the pretty daughter of a Presbyterian elder who is wholly unable to understand the young minister's broad views and who finally drives his daughter from home for insisting on upholding her lover and on being true to him. The young people eventually go to New York and are married. The narrowness, the tragedy, the humor, the pathos, even, of such a life are admirably drawn by the author, in a way that is certain to make this book a great success.

AS TO SELLING (NOT PRINTING) BOOKS

TO PRINT an edition of fifty thousand is a simple matter. To sell half of what is printed is quite another thing. We are not mentioning, here, how many of Conan Doyle's novel, The Hound of the Baskervilles, we have printed up to date. But we don't mind telling you that we have sold fifty thousand. Re-orders for 6,360 reached us one day after publication. SHERLOCK HOLMES has justified our confidence in him as a selling agent. We could probably have sold just as many at $1.50, but the price is only $1.25.

Less than a month after publication Stewart Edward White's novel of the Michigan forests, The Blazed Trail ($1.50), has gone into a third edition. This is another book in which we foresaw success, though it has come quicker than we expected. Henry Wallace Phillips's joyous cowpuncher, Red Saunders ($1.25), and The Madness of Philip ($1.50), delightful stories about children, written for grown-ups by Josephine Dodge Daskam, are both launched in second editions.

McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO., NEW YORK

P. S.—We have a different story to tell every time (all true, however) about The House With the Green Shutters. It is now in its eighth edition and selling fast.

PUBLISHERS who safeguard crevices through which high binding bills creep, are ultimately bound to lead the procession in the onward march of progress. Just stop long enough in the whirl of your busy hours to consider the vast importance and advantage to your interests which a connection with me implies. A line to me either to call or submit samples and estimates will have the desired effect. The annual sum total I am positive I can save you in your binding account is sufficient to provide a dividend, the amount of which some of the best publishers don't earn. In spite of being your lowest bidder I will give you the highest character of work, employing only the highest priced labor, thus obtaining the best possible results. My plant and facilities are unequalled. Don't allow yourselves to be blinded by cant and misrepresentation. The constant hum of my busy plant is a sufficient answer to those who disregard the broad plane of justice and equality. Even those publishers who have their own plants find that I can do their work cheaper and better than they can produce it themselves.

THE HOLMAN BIBLES

WITH all due respect to those of our friends who express the opinion that there is no demand for Family Bibles, we can and do say that there is an increased demand for these editions, as our sales for the past few years very thoroughly proved.

The simple fact in the matter is that many booksellers have discouraged sales by not having stock on hand. Why not be prepared for this demand?

FAMILY BIBLES

Catholic Controversy in Fiction

A TRIO OF NOVELS demonstrating in enlightened and just discussion the influence of ROMAN CATHOLICISM on social life to-day

1. CASTING OF NETS
By RICHARD BAGOT
12mo. Price $1.50
Opinion of Rabbi JOSEPH KRAUSKOPF, D.D.: "The story is excellently written; it holds the reader spellbound from first to last."
Purpose: Shewing Rome's Proselytizing Methods

2. A ROMAN MYSTERY
By RICHARD BAGOT
12mo. Price $1.50
Opinion of Literature: "'A Roman Mystery' shows a very accurate observation of the social atmosphere of the Italian capital; so true a glimpse of the inner life of the Roman Aristocracy."
Subject: Temporal Power of the Pope

3. THE CATHOLIC
By an Anonymous Writer

Author's Advertisement: "A picture of life," not a novel with a purpose. The story is the record of a proud Englishwoman under the influence of a great spiritual power. She is not held up to the admiration or to the reprobation of the reader; judgment is not passed upon her by the author; she is merely presented.

LOVERS OF POETRY HAVE A FEAST OF PLEASURE BEFORE THEM THIS SPRING and SUMMER IN READING and REREADING

INDIA'S LOVE LYRICS

Collected and Arranged by LAURENCE HOPE

The London ATHENÆUM, in its review of the volume, written by one who must be himself a true poet, writes:

"Mr. Hope brings to his task considerable command over various rhythms and a delicate gift of melody and sensuous beauty. His garden signifies the tremulous

IRRECOVERABLE DELICIOUSNESS OF YOUNG PASSION.

Mr. Hope has caught admirably the dominant notes of this Indian love poetry, its delirious absorption in the instant, its out-of-door air, its melancholy. Slender brown limbs stir silently in the garden, in the hot, jasmine-scented jungle among the pink almond blossoms of Kandahar. And always there is the poignant sense of the fleetness of love—a moment's salvage from the flux of time."

WHERE FLYING FOXES CROSS THE MOON
